

It might seem like a zabawka concept to put together a brewer from Oklahoma, a winemaker from California and grapes farmed in Oregon. But it also makes perfect sense. After years of collaborating on all things fermentable, Chase and I decided to get serious. We wanted to have some focus, but also make things in a style we really believed in.

After a long day tasting through barrel after barrel, we kept coming back to a single barrel of Oregon Pinot Noir. A perfect mix of youthful energy and Old World funk.

Grapes have been grown in Oregon for decades, but it's really expanded over the past 10 years — the world has discovered how special it is. Sometimes, you just need an outsider's perspective to make everything a little fresher. That is American Recordings.

AMERICAN RECORDINGS.

AMERICAN SOLERA x FIELD RECORDINGS.

TASTING NOTES

Toasted coconut sprinkled over crushed pineapple. Hint of vanilla and quince. Perfect balance of tartness with a hint of cream.

PAIRINGS

Perfect white wine for thanksgiving dinner. Will shine with Grandma's ham, jello salad and dressing. Hopefully your family makes that potato dish with the corn flake crust. This one will take dinner absolutely off the charts.
